

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A specially designed system for E-Business and for access to sources (goods, services and information) is provided which is based on an enclosed network environment comprising a group of servers connected to an independent network with established and secured communication with the surroundings. This ensures that clients are properly mediated and secured access is available via the interface. The interface is the place where all internal services are provided to the Client. The system ensures transparent and safe implementation of Internet business, quick and easy acquisition of any kind of information whatsoever (data) from electronic sources without the need for special knowledge or skills (knowledge of electronic addresses, ability to control searching servers, etc.), and guarantees the observance of license agreements and protection of copyright, allows mass dissemination of the use of electronic trade by user groups who do not possess special knowledge.